

Continuity is key to Haworth Wholefoods

You'll have to look closely to notice any significant changes at Haworth Wholefoods. It is still a community based shop with an amazing selection of ethically sourced products: fresh organic fruit and veg, favourite vegan options, healthy snacks & treats, dry goods like porridge oats, flour, nuts, beans, pulses, condiments, handmade baked goods, and a great selection of natural soaps and toiletries.

Despite all the challenges it faced to keep going under the Covid-19 restrictions, Sally Hayes and her team at Haworth Wholefoods managed to keep open and busy, and for that, Sally is grateful. There is also other news to share...

"I shall be very sorry to go but I'm really delighted that Dagmar Robertson will be taking over and continuing to offer the same service to the good folk of Haworth and beyond. Our customers are wonderful and deserve the very best. I'd also like to thank the other shopkeepers on Main Street who have been incredibly friendly, generous and supportive over the years and I will miss you all. And lastly, to my wonderful staff, Libby, Heather, Alison and Janet, thank you so much for everything – it's been a blast, especially over these past few months," Sally said.

Fortunately it looks like things will remain familiar and the friendly community vibe will continue as local Haworth resident Dagmar takes ownership of Haworth Wholefoods in July. As an avid customer of Haworth Wholefoods since it opened its doors in 2016, Dagmar surprised himself with his growing interest in the business when he learned that it was for sale. "I think it is an honest and straight forward shop and that is one of the things that appealed to me. I also appreciate the hard work that has been done here to establish Haworth Wholefoods and I recognise that Sally has built a lot of trust in the community by providing a much valued service. I don't have any grand plans to change anything only perhaps opening on Sunday. We are following government guidelines to keep people safe and the shop accessible. Customers are also welcome to place their orders over the phone or on our new Online Order page on the website, and collect, or we can deliver; It is business as usual," Dagmar asserts.

The trend for shopping locally is likely to grow and hopefully the momentum and commitment from the community will continue to support small shops like Haworth

Wholefoods that depend significantly on regular local custom. Contact:
